Dear Bill Neichter:

Thanks for your latest mailing. Interesting.

I don't know whether we'll ever have that lunch we've been writing back and forth about for so long. My days in Kentucky are almost over; on June 2, I leave for Baltimore and a new job as the arts editor of The Baltimore Sun.

Where does that leave the John Sherman Cooper book project? Well, I'll take it with me. I want to finish it, and I hope to do further research and interviews in the Washington area. The Sun has a long tradition of authors on its staff; in fact, among the writers on the arts staff, the movie critic is also a best-selling author of thrillers and the art critic is about to write a book about H.L. Mencken.

I'll catch up with you at some point. Good luck, and thanks again.

Sincerely,
Harry Merritt

Wonder if he will run my book reviews!

P. S. If it does not quit raining, we are all going to SWAP!
